Wife the "Lavender Lady"

Lemp was married in 1899 to Miss Lillian Handlan. Mrs. Lemp, because of her fondness for a particular color in her apparel, became known as "the Lavender Lady."

In 1909-Mrs. Le np obtained a divorce ofter a hotly contested case which re-ceived wide publicity. In May, 1916, Lemp merried Mrs. Ellie Kochler Limberg, a widow. She was prostrated when informed of the death.

Judge Tests Auto for Speed; Fines Driver

CHICAGO, Dec. 29 .-- Hyman Miller, arrested for speeding, put up the familiar claim in court today that his machine could not make forty miles an hour. The patrolman who arrested him said he was traveling forty miles an hour, endangering the lives of all

"It can't be done!" roared Hyman and his father. "We'll give the bus to any one who can get forty miles an hour out of her."

"Come on," said Judge Schwaba, reaching for his hat and overcoat. 'I can drive a car a little, and we will see what your boat can do."

Hyman and his father, a policeman and the judge piled into the car and the judge took the wheel and stepped on the gas. Half an hour later they came back. The speedometer showed forty-five miles an hour, so Hyman lost his car and the judge also imposed a fine of $50 and costs on him.

At about the same time prohibition agents were being sworn in as deputy United States marshals to serve injunctions on some 300 proprietors of restaurants suspected of being omes in Sahara-on-Broadway. It would appear that in the battle between the allied prohibition and pelice forces and the harassed restaurations the advantage was all with the drys. But the restaurant men, although fighting a losing battle, are game. Last night the Broadway Association began a sturdy offensive against the Volsteadian armies with a fank attack on the police custom of stationing patroimen in restaurants and cubarets. The attack takes the form of a resolution sent to Police Commissioner Enright, and it says in so many words that his system which keeps uniformed policemen in respectable places of amusement, when they might be more usefully employed elsewhere, is all wrong. The announcement has particular reference to the pending "festivities," if any.

I know of no one who has seriously tried to enforce it. The various prohibition directors, whose primary duty it is to enforce the law, during their brief tenures of office have brought us thousands of cases to clutter up and clog our calendars, but few of any improvement.
